MR. MCGARRAHAN'S FUNERAL.

His Remains Laid at Rest in Mt. Olivet Cemetery.

All that is mortal of William McGarrahan, who died on Monday last, the victim of forty years of unsuccessfull litigation before Congress, was laid at rest at Mt. Olivet cemetery this morning. Low requiem mass was celebrated in St. Peter's Church, corner of 2d and C streets southeast, at 9:30 a.m. in presence of an audience of friends, the gentle old man who died without a kin.

About fifty of Mr. McGarrahan's friends met at Lee's undertaking establishment, on the avenue, at 9 o'clock and were driven thence to the church. There were several hundred floral offerings, including a large wreath from the members of the Press Club, who were among McGarrahan's best wishes, a handsome bunch of roses from the stenographers of the Senate, who counted McGarrahan as an official member of their staff, and a handsome wreath from Mrs. John F. Ellis. Mass was celebrated by Father O'Brien, pastor of the church, and lasted about half an hour.

The church was well filled by those who have known Mr. McGarrahan in life, as well as many others who had heard of him through his long-continued efforts to secure justice for the victims of the "Pullman" case. Some of those who were present were Mr. L. Q. Washington, a well-known correspondent; Mr. John F. Coyle, Mr. Thomas Murphy, the chief stenographer of the Senate; his brother, Mr. Chas. Murphy, Mr. William Murphy, Mr. George F. Bailey, Mr. William Dickson, Mr. John F. Ellis. After mass McGarrahan's remains were taken to the cemetery, and the funeral service was held at 10 o'clock.

A dozen carriages followed the hearse to the cemetery, where the remains were taken to the cemetery, and the funeral service was held at 10 o'clock.

A CALIFORNIA BIG TREE.

One of the latest and most interesting acquisitions of the Agricultural Department is a section of one of the far-famed giant trees of California (twenty-three feet in diameter, one and a half in circumference, and thirty feet in height). This tree, which is familiar to all world's fair visitors, being, as it was, in the government building, has been recently erected in the southeastern part of the agricultural grounds.

In order to be transported from its place of growth to the railway station, this tree had to be sawn in sections, and each section hauled sixty miles by a team of mules; besides this, the estimated expense to the government for its transportation and erection was $10,000. At present, however, it is not entirely finished. It will be divided into an upper and lower section, and the upper section will be added, and upon completion it will rank well among the many attractions of Washington.

Mariposa county, California, from which this tree came, contains 134 trees similar in nature to the one on exhibition, but varying in height and general dimensions. Five or six other collections of these trees have been found, one in Tuolumne and one or two in Inyo county. In all these groves there are many trees of the same size, but from 25 to 34 feet in diameter, and of exceedingly graceful proportions. Some of the largest of these trees, however, are of an age of from 2,000 to 3,000 years. The dimensions of one tree in the Tuolumne grove, according to measurements made by the late General Sherman, were 270 feet high, 106 in circumference at base, 70 at a point twelve feet above the ground, 70 at the top of the trunk, and 70 at the top of the trunk.
